Learning outcomes of the course:

The graduate will get acquainted with the beginnings and development of landscape painting, marina and sculptural relief depicting the natural environment. At the same time, he will gain an overview of ways of depicting the urban and rural environment in art. A separate category is working with natural products, incorporating them into the integrity of a work of art. Artificial landscapes - parks and gardens created according to well-thought-out artistic concepts - achieved three-dimensional quality, often of large proportions. Modern fine art has brought new perspectives on the perception of nature as an art medium - characterized by tendencies such as Land Art and Earth Art. A special phenomenon is the art work with the city, respectively. industrial landscape. Artistic interventions in public space are other possibilities of inspiration by the country. Students complete theoretical preparation for practical exercises, which the student will complete in higher semesters and years of study.
