SP 4.2. There is a flexibility in learning paths and in the achievement of learning outcomes. The study programme allows adequate education outside the university in domestic and foreign institutions, particularly through a mobility support. The results of this education are recognized by the institution.

Self-assessment of compliance

SP 4.2.1. Flexible learning pathways and the achievement of learning outcomes are enabled.

The study programme is designed to ensure flexibility in learning pathways. The student chooses their own learning trajectory by supplementing the recommended study plan through elective units in the study and research part of the doctoral study programme.

SP 4.2.2. The study programme enables appropriate education outside the university at domestic and foreign institutions, especially through the support of mobilities. The outcomes of such education are recognized by the university.

The doctoral study program Theory and Didactics of Physical Education and Sports Education is designed to support the internationalization and development of doctoral students' research competencies. The study program creates variable opportunities for doctoral students to participate in international mobility programs. A predetermined period specifically reserved for student mobility, known as the mobility window, is recommended for students in their 2nd to 5th semesters of study in this study program.

Students have the opportunity to participate in long-term mobility for the purpose of study - Foreign Study Stay (1-3 months), or for the purpose of research - Foreign Research Stay (1-3 months). Shorter mobility schemes and other purposes of foreign travel (e.g., in the form of internships, study visits, BIP, summer schools) are also supported, which we refer to as Erasmus+ Short-Term Doctoral Student Mobility (5-30 days).

In addition to traditional physical mobility, it also offers the following forms of alternative mobility, which enable flexible involvement of students in the international academic environment:

1. Virtual mobility

- o Participation in online courses, seminars, or research activities at partner universities.
- o Doctoral students can take selected courses that are recognized in their individual study plans.

2. Online mobility and e-learning

- o Participation in specialized e-learning modules and MOOC courses (in the field of physical education and sports education),

SP 4.3. The variety of forms and methods used in teaching, learning and assessing of learning outcomes stimulates students to take an active role in the process of learning and developing their academic careers. In higher education institutions, students are adequately, and in relation to the learning outcomes and level of the qualifications framework of the study programme, involved in research/artistic/other activities.

Self-assessment of compliance SP 4.3.1. The teaching, learning, and assessment methods used in the study programme encourage students to take an active role in the learning process and in the development of their academic careers. The teaching and learning methods in the doctoral study programme are designed to actively engage students in the learning process and the development of their academic careers. Primarily used are individual consultations, research seminars, presentations of research results, and involvement in scientific and pedagogical activities. Assessment of learning outcomes is based on continuous research and publication activities, participation in projects, and the ability to independently solve professional tasks. This approach supports the development of critical thinking, independence, and professional competencies of doctoral students. SP 4.3.2. Students are involved in the creative activities of the higher education institution in accordance with the learning outcomes and the qualification level of the study programme. Doctoral students are systematically involved in the creative activities of the university in alignment with the learning outcomes and the qualification framework of the third cycle. and pedagogical activities. This contributes to the development of their independence and readiness for autonomous scientific work. SP 4.4.2. Students are provided with appropriate guidance and support from teachers based on mutual respect and dignity. The Faculty of Education at CU has a system of academic advisors aimed at improving the efficiency of the university's study system, helping students orient themselves and effectively select subjects in line with their individual study plans, areas of interest, and the real situation in the labour market. The advisor also supports students with study-related difficulties, communication with the academic environment, and serves as a counselor for student mobility and a facilitator in research, interest-based, or other activities. An academic advisor is typically appointed for a specific year of study, study programme, or field of study and is listed in the Study Information Guide at the Faculty of Education, Catholic University. Each teacher is required to set consultation hours for the subject(s) they teach in the given semester. These hours are used to provide additional explanations of the taught material and to answer other questions related to the subject matter. SP 4.5. The study programme is delivered in a way that reinforces the internal motivation of students to continuously improve leading to the observance of principles of the academic ethics or professional ethics in the case of a professionally oriented bachelor's degree programme.

Self-assessment of compliance SP 4.5.1. The study programme is implemented in a manner that fosters students' intrinsic motivation for continuous improvement and encourages adherence to the principles of academic ethics or professional ethics, in the case of professionally oriented bachelor's study programmes. Evidence of student motivation procedures is provided by the Scholarship Regulations of the Catholic University (e.g. merit-based scholarships for academic excellence, Dean's and Rector's awards). Students are also encouraged to participate in various competitions, as well as in the organization of seminars and conferences. Each year, the most active students participate in student research competitions (ŠUČ or ŠVOČ). Students have opportunities to engage in faculty activities, activities of partner institutions, local or regional government initiatives, and other relevant activities aligned with the mission of the Catholic University and aimed at fostering active learning for improved employability. Students are supported by their instructors in undertaking independent initiatives that enhance their knowledge, skills, and competences. Students are also guided in accordance with the principles of academic ethics. They are informed about unethical behaviour and its consequences (e.g. plagiarism). Guidelines related to the principles of academic ethics are defined in the valid Code of Ethics. SP 4.6. The study programme has prescribed rules, criteria, and methods for the assessment of learning outcomes in the study programme that are available to the public in advance. The assessment results must be recorded, documented, and archived.

Self-assessment of compliance SP 4.6.1. The study programme has established and publicly available rules, criteria, and methods for the assessment of learning outcomes. The specific assessment method for each course (continuous assessment, exam) is determined by the course instructor and published in the course information sheet, which is available in the academic information system AIS2KU. Course completion is assessed by a grade. The grade reflects the quality of knowledge or skills acquired in accordance with the course objectives specified in the course information sheet. Assessment is based on the total percentage performance of the student in all forms of assessment. A minimum of 60% is required to successfully pass the course. The grading system at KU uses a six-grade scale (for more details, see the Study Regulations, Article 11). SP 4.6.2. Assessment results are recorded, documented, and archived. The recording, documentation, and archiving of documents at KU, including assessment results, are governed by the KU Filing Plan. The Filing Plan is an annex to the Filing Rules and serves the purpose of efficient and systematic storage of files related to applicants, students, and graduates (e.g. course transcripts, records and results of state examinations, and signatures of state examination board members). It defines the retention and archiving periods for each type of document. The KU Filing Plan, its components, and amendments are prepared by the university's records administrator in cooperation with heads of organizational units or designated staff.	References to evidence Course Information Sheets Study Regulations of the Faculty of Education, CU Amendment No. 1 to the Study Regulations of the Faculty of Education, CU Študijný poriadok PF KU Dodatok č.1 k Študijnému poriadku PF KU Directive on the Formal Requirements of Qualification Theses Smernica o náležitostiach kvalifikačných prác Catholic University Records Management Regulations 2020 – RDSS Amendment on Entry into Force Registraturný-poriadok-KU-2020-RDSSmena-ucinnosti.pdf

SP 4.7. Assessment methods and criteria are known in advance and accessible to students, they are included in the different parts/subjects/modules of the programme, and they are suitable for a fair, consistent, transparent verification of acquired knowledge, skills, and competencies.

Self-assessment of compliance	References to evidence
SP 4.7.1. The methods and criteria of assessment are included in the individual parts/courses/modules of the programme and are known and accessible to students in advance. The study plan defines the chronological and content-based sequence of courses. Students compile their study plan themselves or with the help of a study advisor, selecting from the list of courses offered within the programme in order to meet the rules of the study programme and the provisions of the PF KU Study Regulations and the Doctoral Study Guidelines upon enrolment. At the time of enrolment, students decide which part of the study obligations prescribed by the programme and recommended in the study plan they will complete in the given academic year, while ensuring they fulfil the conditions required to proceed in their studies or to complete them. The student bears full responsibility for the completeness of their enrolment. Before the beginning of the semester, students must confirm in the AIS system that they have read the course information sheets and are thus familiar in advance with the course content, completion requirements, and assessment methods. The assessment methods and criteria are defined in the course information sheets, which are available on the website of the relevant department delivering the study programme. SP 4.7.2. The assessment methods and criteria are appropriate for the fair, consistent, and transparent verification of acquired knowledge, skills, and competencies. The evaluation of student performance within a course is carried out primarily through continuous assessment during the semester (e.g. control questions, written tests, individual assignments, term papers, presentations), final exams, or a combination of both. The number of exams per semester and academic year is determined in the recommended study plan. The exact assessment method for each course (continuous assessment or final exam) is specified by the course instructor in the course information sheet published in the AIS2KU academic information system. A unified and valid internal legal framework (PF KU Study Regulations – Article 11: Evaluation of study results, and the Doctoral Study Guidelines at PF KU – Article 9: Credit system and evaluation of study results) guarantees consistency and fairness, as well as equal treatment of all students based on clearly defined and pre-established rules. Public access and transparency of assessment procedures for stakeholders are ensured through the publication of all relevant documents and internal regulations on the university and faculty websites and in the academic information system. In case students feel that the assessment by an instructor was unfair, non-transparent, or inconsistent, they may appeal to the head of the department, the Vice-Dean for Science and Art, or the Dean, who may review the assessment in question. SP 4.8. The assessment provides students with a reliable feedback on the degree of fulfillment of learning outcomes, where appropriate with advice on learning progression.

Self-assessment of compliance	References to evidence
SP 4.8.1. Assessment provides students with reliable feedback on the level of achievement of learning outcomes, which is, if necessary, linked to counselling for academic progress. The assessment of learning outcomes in the doctoral programme is designed to provide students with reliable and constructive feedback on the extent to which they meet the defined learning outcomes. Feedback is provided on an ongoing basis through supervisory consultations. If deficiencies are identified, the assessment is complemented by guidance aimed at supporting further academic progress, including recommendations for professional and methodological training or mentoring. Each instructor maintains a Record of Oral Examination for every student, which allows them to evaluate the level of achieved learning outcomes and provide reliable feedback to students. If the feedback indicates problematic progress in the studies of a particular student, the faculty ensures the provision of effective support for the student's academic advancement. This can be initiated either by a faculty staff member or by the student themselves. Upon receiving such a suggestion, the Vice-Dean for Education may propose the establishment of a working commission to investigate the issue and propose suitable measures. The commission is appointed by the Dean of the faculty. The commission consists of: - the guarantor of the study programme, - the head of the relevant department, - a representative of the KU Counselling Centre, - the teachers of the courses where the student has shown problematic academic progress, - the year coordinator (if appointed). The main task of the commission is to investigate the root causes of the student's difficulties, identify their needs, and ensure effective support for academic advancement. SP 5.4.1. Within the implementation of the study programme, the effective use of tools to ensure research integrity and to prevent and address plagiarism and other forms of academic misconduct is guaranteed. In the implementation of the doctoral study programme, the effective use of tools to ensure research integrity and prevent academic misconduct is strictly guaranteed. Students are introduced to the ethical principles of scientific work, citation rules, and the requirements for academic honesty already in the initial phases of their studies. The university systematically uses software tools for checking the originality of texts—not only for dissertations, but also for seminar and publication outputs of doctoral students. The doctoral training includes seminars and workshops focused on scientific integrity, ethical aspects of research, and proper publishing practices. In the case of suspected plagiarism or other violations of academic ethics, a clearly defined procedure is in place. This includes investigation, assessment by the relevant committee, and the adoption of appropriate measures. These procedures are regulated by the Dean's Directive on the Requirements for Final Theses and the Completion of Studies at the Faculty of Education of the Catholic University, which addresses breaches of research integrity and plagiarism in final theses. V. Self-assessment Standard 6 – Teaching staff

SP 6.1. The institution has sufficient teaching staff with the required qualification, workload allocation, research/artistic/other activities, practical skills, teaching skills, and transferable competencies that enable them to achieve learning outcomes, and whose language competencies correspond to the language requirements of the study programme.

Self-assessment of compliance	References to evidence
SP 6.1.1. The higher education institution ensures that the study programme is delivered by teachers whose qualifications, level of creative output, practical experience, pedagogical skills, and transferable competencies enable students to achieve the intended learning outcomes. The study programme is delivered by an academic team that meets the requirements for qualification, professional and creative activity, as well as pedagogical competence. The core staff includes two full professors and three associate professors who cover the key profile areas of the programme. Their professional qualification guarantees that students achieve the required learning outcomes in accordance with established standards. Teachers are actively involved in scientific and research activities, publishing results in both domestic and international journals and participating in grant and project tasks. Their practical experience is reflected in the course content through cooperation with professional partners and participation in expert discussions, conferences, and advisory bodies. Pedagogical skills and transferable competences are developed through reflection on student feedback, class observations, and further didactic training. Emphasis is placed on supporting critical thinking, communication, and teamwork skills of students. Strengths: • The programme's core is formed by highly qualified teachers (2 professors, 3 associate professors) • Strong integration between research, practice, and teaching • Systematic support for pedagogical and transferable skills Areas for improvement: • Strengthening internationalisation of the teaching staff (international mobility, joint publications) SP 6.1.2. The higher education institution ensures that the teachers of the study programme have language skills corresponding to the languages in which the study programme is delivered. The teaching staff of the study programme possess language skills fully corresponding to the language of instruction. The programme is conducted in Slovak, and all teachers are either native speakers or have long-term teaching experience in the Slovak academic environment, ensuring full-quality knowledge transfer and communication. Several teachers also actively use English in their publishing and conference activities, and some	Records of Teachers' Professional and Pedagogical Activities (as part of the submitted documentation) Records of Teachers' Research and Creative Activities (as part of the submitted documentation)

This enhances the internationalisation of the programme and allows students to engage with academic discourse in another language. SP 6.1.3. The higher education institution ensures that the number of teachers, their working capacity and workload distribution correspond to the number of students and the personnel demands of educational activities. The staffing of the study programme is designed to match the number of students and the complexity of educational activities. The teaching team includes two professors, three associate professors, and other lecturers from various departments, allowing balanced workload distribution and an appropriate student–teacher ratio. The distribution of working capacity considers all types of academic work – lectures, seminars, practical exercises, consultation hours, thesis supervision, and examination duties. The workload system is coordinated at the faculty level to prevent staff overload and to provide sufficient time for research and publication activities. In case of an increased number of students or introduction of new courses, the faculty promptly strengthens staffing capacity by hiring assistant lecturers or involving external professionals from practice. The rules for determining the minimum number of teaching hours per teacher at the Faculty of Education, with respect to weekly workload, are defined in the Dean's Directive No. 1/2018 on workloads and performance of internal academic staff at the Faculty of Education, Catholic University in Ružomberok. Strengths: • Stable academic team with adequate working capacity • Balanced distribution of teaching load among professors and associate professors • Functional coordination system at the faculty level Areas for improvement: • Continuous monitoring of the teacher–student ratio in light of projected student growth • Strengthening capacity for thesis supervision in larger cohorts	Records of Teachers' Professional and Pedagogical Activities (as part of the submitted documentation) Dean's Directive of the Faculty of Education, CU, on Workloads and Performance of Full-Time Academic Staff Smernica dekana na PF KU o úväzkoch a výkonoch interných vedecko-pedagogických zamestnancov Records of Teachers' Professional and Pedagogical Activities (as part of the submitted documentation)

SP 6.5. The staff supervising final theses are active in research/artistic/other activities or in a professional practice at the level corresponding to the degree of the study programme in the field of professional and thematic scope of the supervised theses.

The ID of the procedure:

Dissertation supervisors are staff members in the position of professor or associate professor or in another similar position in a contracted research institution cooperating with a higher education institution in the delivery of a third-degree study programme.

Self-assessment of compliance	References to evidence
SP 6.5.1. Persons supervising final theses are actively involved in creative or practical activities at a level corresponding to the degree of the study programme and the professional and thematic focus of the supervised theses. Final theses in the study programme are supervised by individuals who are actively engaged in scientific-research or practical activities aligned with the level and professional orientation of the programme. Dissertation topics are derived from ongoing scientific projects, expert discussions, and the practical experience of academic staff, ensuring their academic relevance and linkage to the supervisors' creative activities. Theses are supervised by professors and associate professors who regularly publish in national and international scholarly journals, participate in grant projects, or are active in practice in fields closely related to the topics of the theses. This guarantees that students not only gain theoretical knowledge while working on their theses but also acquire experience reflecting the current state of the discipline. The guarantor of the study programme, in cooperation with the head of the relevant department, regularly reviews the level of the supervisors' active creative or practical activity. This review must comply with the applicable Methodology for Evaluating Standards, Part V: Methodology for Evaluating Creative Activities, and the Methodological Guideline for Assessing the Level of Outputs of Creative Activities at the Catholic University in Ružomberok (CZ 01775/2025). The guarantor, together with the department head, must assign supervisors of final theses who perform active creative or practical work at: • a significant international level in the case of dissertation supervisors, • at least an internationally recognized level for master's thesis supervisors, • at least a nationally recognized level for bachelor's thesis supervisors. SP 6.5.2. Dissertation supervisors are professors, associate professors, or persons in equivalent positions in research institutions contractually cooperating in delivering the third-cycle study programme with the university. Supervisors of dissertation theses in the third-cycle study programme are highly qualified individuals holding the position of professor or associate professor in the relevant field of study. These supervisors provide expert guidance to doctoral students and ensure that dissertation theses meet the criteria for originality, methodological rigour, and international relevance. If specialized topics require it, experts from research institutions that have a contractual collaboration with the university may also be involved in supervising dissertations. This enables doctoral students to access expertise in specific research areas and fosters their integration into a broader scientific community. SP 6.6. The teaching staff develop their professional, language, pedagogical, digital skills, and transferable competencies.
Self-assessment of compliance SP 6.6.1. Teachers of the study programme develop their professional, language, pedagogical, digital skills, and transferable competencies. Academic staff of the study programme systematically develop in all areas necessary for high-quality teaching. Professional skills are strengthened through scientific research activities, publishing, and participation in national and international projects. Teachers regularly present at conferences and professional events, maintaining an up-to-date overview of developments in their field. Language competencies are developed primarily through participation in international mobility programmes, publishing in English, and teaching courses or giving lectures in foreign languages. Pedagogical skills are enhanced through internal training sessions, class observations, and student feedback. Teachers improve their digital competencies by incorporating modern technologies into their teaching (e-learning platforms, interactive tools, online consultations) and by sharing best practices within the department. Transferable competencies, such as teamwork, communication skills, and student mentoring, are cultivated through daily teaching and project-related work. The faculty provides teachers with opportunities at least once a year to participate in training/educational activities aimed at developing their professional, language, pedagogical, digital skills, or transferable competencies. These training or educational activities may be delivered by external service providers or by the faculty's own competent staff. For instance, professional training may take the form of scientific seminars at departments, language training may be offered as language courses at the faculty or university, pedagogical training may take the form of workshops for the development of teaching skills, and digital training may involve workshops focused on digital competencies. SP 7.1.1. Teachers responsible for the core courses of the study programme demonstrate creative outputs in the relevant field(s) of study in which the study programme is delivered, at a significant international level, in the case of a third-cycle study programme, separately for each study programme, in accordance with the Methodology for the Evaluation of Creative Activities, as defined in Part V of that methodology. Teachers responsible for the core courses of the study programme demonstrate regular and verifiable creative activity in the relevant field of study. The results of this activity reach a level recognized at least at the national level, in line with the Methodology for the Evaluation of Creative Activities (Part V). Faculty members publish in domestic scientific and professional journals, present at scientific conferences, and participate in national grant projects. Some of them are also involved in international research projects and expert discussions, which enhances the domestic base of the programme in terms of quality. The outcomes of their creative activity are reflected in the content and updates of the core courses. As a result, students are guided to address topics that reflect current trends in the field and adopt the methods that their teachers apply in their own scholarly work. SP 7.1.2. Teachers responsible for the core courses of the study programme demonstrate creative outputs in the relevant field(s) of study in which the study programme is delivered, at least at an internationally recognized level, in the case of a second-cycle study programme or a joint first- and second-cycle study programme, separately for each study programme, in accordance with the Methodology for the Evaluation of Creative Activities, as defined in Part V of that methodology. barriers to education for students with disabilities. At the Faculty of Education, the e-learning system is built using Moodle. Teachers can create and students can use the following within e-learning for each subject: • Instruction organized by weekly teaching units or thematic blocks, • Study materials presented in various file formats (ppt, pdf, doc, html, xls), • Various types of tests and automatic evaluation to verify student knowledge, • Communication tools such as email, chat, and discussion forums for interaction between students and teachers. 2/ Microsoft Office 365 – students and teachers have free access to both the online and offline versions of the Microsoft Office 365 suite. They log in with their university credentials. The system can be used in the online version, offering full access to all programs and tools with automatic cloud backup, or in the offline version installed on a personal computer. The MS Teams communication platform, part of Microsoft Office 365, was implemented to meet the need for synchronous video-based teaching, since Moodle is primarily oriented towards asynchronous learning. Although third-party video conferencing systems could be used, they are not robust or reliable enough for the demanding academic environment. MS Teams videoconferencing is used in fully remote teaching during: • the explanatory phase (for presenting content), • the examination phase (for testing), • and for individual student consultations. Other aspects of distance learning (time management, grading, tracking of student outputs) are handled through the Moodle system. Teachers and students can use MS Teams in each course: • For online teaching via webcam and microphone, which enables personal teacher-student contact, • For presenting study materials in various formats (ppt, pdf, doc, html, xls), • For interactive whiteboard use during online teaching – the teacher writes on the board and students can view the content in real time, • For recording lectures offline and sharing them later, • For creating and automatically evaluating quizzes using Microsoft Forms. In the case of distance or blended learning, students are guaranteed access to course content and study materials through the Moodle system. Moodle is accessible via a banner (on the right side) of the main website of the Faculty of Education or directly at: https://moodle.pf.ku.sk. At the beginning of their studies, students receive authentication credentials for all key university systems (AIS, Moodle, Email, Meal system, etc.). After logging into Moodle, students have access to educational courses corresponding to the subjects taught, categorized by departments. To access and enrol in a specific course, students require a password provided by the teacher at the beginning of the semester. This ensures that each student is enrolled in the currently taught course and has all the necessary information to successfully complete the subject.	https://moodle.pf.ku.sk/
